5) American Association of University Women records, 1940-2014

Collection Number: MS 0117

Size: 113 boxes

Description:

The American Association of University Women is an organization whose membership is composed of women with baccalaureate degrees who are committed to continuing their education informally through study groups and to providing scholarships for women who desire to obtain advanced degrees. They are concerned with the status of women and helping women gain positions of influence in higher education. Every year a "Distinguished Woman Award" is to be given to an outstanding woman of the state, and there are programs that encourage young women to go to college.

Collection includes minutes and reports from state meetings, legislative and lobbying material, as well as other publications related to the group.

Important Collection

Business

6) Helen B. Andelin papers, 1932-2006.

Collection Number: MS 0551

Size: 17 boxes

Description:

Helen Andelin was an LDS woman who gained acclaim for sharing the 'secrets' to a happy marriage. Her first book, Fascinating Womanhood, was published in 1963 as a text for her classes. By the mid-1970s the book had become the basis for courses taught across the country designed and was a bestseller. Contains correspondence, news clippings, teacher application forms, newsletters, day planners, brochures, pamphlets, and a scrapbook.

Box 2, Folder 1 - Correspondence from Readers

The Andelin papers are all focused on her book and her "Fascinating Womanhood" classes. There is little personal information or reflections about her creation and running of the business and program. The readers' correspondence provide responses to her book and reflect how applying Andelin's ideas saved their marriages. A key part of "Fascinating Womanhood" was encouraging women to stay home, instead of going to work, and the correspondence from readers shows a perspective of women who were choosing to leave business and labor involvement and stay at home. The other boxes include pamphlets, presentations, and additional correspondence from readers.

7) Grace Tanner Anderson autobiographical sketch, 20th century

Collection Number: ACCN 2906

Size: 1 box

Contains scholarly research and writings, specifically regarding Willa Cather. Arnold is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and writings include BYU Women's Conference, devotionals, lectures on religious topics. No personal materials.

Civic

9) Aurora Club records, 1913-1990

Collection Number: MS 0569

Size: 7 boxes

Description:

The Aurora Club started as a social club but moved into other activities including book readings and charitable projects. The collection contains meeting minutes, correspondence, and other information relating to the club.

Civic

10) Authors Club records, 1893-2012.

Collection Number: MS 0240

Size: 10 boxes

Description:

The Authors Club was organized in Salt Lake City, Utah, in 1893 to "form a club for the study of the works of the best authors." The club expanded to establish traveling libraries, help in war relief activities, and offer a free kindergarten, as well as collaborate with Utah women political groups. Membership in the club is generally limited to those from prominent Salt Lake City families. The Authors Club records (1893-2012) consist of minute books, annual histories, yearbooks, and some general materials surrounding one of the longest running women's clubs in Utah.

The fundraising/money aspects of the Author's Club were all focused around funding their organization and planning social events and luncheons, with no mention of welfare. All of the first members of the club in 1893 were members of the LDS church, but that was never a specification for membership. The club met in the General boardroom of the Relief Society until 1940, and would frequently meet in LDS meetinghouses. The club meeting would begin with an opening prayer. See, club histories, programs, and minutes (Box 1, Folder 9). This collection would be useful to show the influence of the church on business and civic groups in Utah, but there is no helpful mention of welfare.

The collections contains materials relating primarily to her dancing career, as well as personal and business correspondence.

13) Delcie Lee Wood Bell papers, 1934-2012

Collection Number: ACCN 2969

Size: 1 box

Description:

Delcie Lee Wood Bell was an active member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Utah during the latter part of her life. Contains biographical information, photographs, and mainly correspondence between Delcie and her second daughter, Beverly Mowery. The rich papers contain correspondence with her daughter about day to day life, gardening, cooking, and laundry. It even describes how one of the kids broke their foot and is in a cast. It's not about religion or business. Her biography mentions that she was active in the LDS church in the latter part of her life, and there are few times she tells her daughter she is so annoyed with something she is going to start smoking again. But there are no overt mentions of religion in the letters.

Arts

14) Marie Nelson Bennett papers, 1939-2013

Collection Number: ACCN 1664

Size: 1 box

Description:

Important Collection

Politics

16) Reva Beck Bosone papers, 1927-1977.

Collection Number: MS 0127

Size: 38 boxes

Description:

Reva Beck Bosone (b. 1895) was the first woman sent to U.S. House of Representatives by the State of Utah and first woman to serve on the House Interior Committee. Also was a city justice, U.S. Congresswoman, judicial officer of the U.S. Post Office Department, and held other positions of state and national importance. Contains autobiography and biography; correspondence; speeches and articles; election campaigns; appointments; honors; scrapbooks; tapes and records.

Box 1, Folder 11-12 - in detail autobiography, intersection of her personal life and professional life. Very useful in understanding her personal reflection as a woman who was heavily involved in education and politics in the early twentieth century, and attitudes other women expressed to her about her career. "If Mrs. Bosone can't take care of her child, why is she seeking a job? She should stay at home." This is a very detailed and thorough collection that could easily provide enough information for a single project. Bosone was not a member of the LDS church, but there are frequent mentions of the significance of her not being a member. In her autobiography she talks about going to church with her friends when she was growing up in Utah. In several of her campaign flyers she lists one of her qualifications when running for city commissioner and for U.S. House of Representatives as "being born of 1847 pioneer ancestry." Even though she was not a member, it was a significant factor in her career because she was in Utah. In her political career Bosone was concerned with several welfare issues, worker rights for women and children, supporting reforming alcoholics, conservation of the environment, all details found in her autobiography, and details in campaign information, and speeches she gave in a political capacity. Was the first women judge Utah, and she ruled over dozens of sex crimes.

Civic

17) Orpha Sweeten Boyden papers, 1948-1959

Collection Number: ACCN 2828

23) Olive Woolley Burt papers, 1936-1980

Collection Number: MS 0244

Size: 50 boxes

Description:

Olive Frank Woolley Burt began writing at a young age, growing up in Salt Lake City. She taught elementary school and high school English. She wrote freelance articles in the Deseret News, and eventually took a full-time position as children's feature editor for the Salt Lake Tribune. She is well-known for the over 50 children's books she published throughout her life. Contains manuscripts, research material, photographs, illustrations, and correspondence of several of the books written by Burt during 1928-1980. Also includes scrapbooks and other materials depicting her professional interests as a writer, as well as copies of magazines and articles from the time Burt was an editor at the Deseret News.

Box 4 - correspondence Box 30 - correspondence

The collection contains large amounts of her business correspondence with her publishers and editors about the children's books she was writing. One of the main publishers, Lee M. Hoffman, was also a woman, so it's business correspondence between two women that could be useful to study to see how women were working in the field together. Contains a detailed history of the League of Utah writers, of which she was president, but the organization was not involved in religion or business. There are a few brief mentions of the LDS church and religion in a few articles that she wrote, but religion is not a main or useful part of the collection.

24) Esther and Duward Campbell oral history interview, 1969

Collection Number: MS 0441

In 1914 Ramona Wilcox married Joseph J. Cannon, a widower with three children. During the early years of their marriage, Joseph traveled a great deal working to secure a business he was developing in Colombia. In 1918 Mona and five of the children moved to Colombia to be with Joseph and stayed for almost two years. In 1934 Joseph and Mona were named as President and Relief Society President of the LDS British Mission. The family lived in London from 1934-1937 and traveled extensively through northern Europe. She was a columnist for the Relief Society Magazine. In 1945 Joseph J. Cannon died from cancer. After Joseph's death, Mona taught and wrote to support herself and her youngest son Mark. She taught English at the University of Utah and German, French, Spanish, Latin, English, and history at the high school level. Cannon is perhaps best known for her anonymous writing. In November 1947, at the age of 60, Mona began writing The Deseret News' advice column, "Confidentially Yours," under the pen name "Mary Marker." Her career as Mary Marker spanned 26 years and ended in 1974 with more than 5,000 Mary Marker articles. She was active with numerous community organizations and received several awards for her achievements. At the time of her death in 1978 at the age of 91, Mona was pursuing a Ph.D. in sociology,

26) Bonnie Speyer Carluccio papers, 1924-1958 (bulk 1953-1958).

30) Deedee Corradini papers, 1960-2014

Collection Number: ACCN 2024

Size: 92 boxes

Description:

Deedee Corradini worked in numerous federal and state governments. She became Salt Lake City's first female mayor with her election in 1991. As Mayor, Corradini was instrumental in bringing the 2002 Winter Olympic Games to Salt Lake City, and spent her eight years in office preparing the city to host the games, focusing on infrastructure development. Contains materials on the 2002 Olympic Games, including brochures, pamphlets, reports, and bid books, and materials relating to her campaign.

The Corradini papers contain several speeches she gave during her time as mayor that specifically reflect on the skills as a businesswoman she brought to running the city, and contain examples of how she changed things to run the government more like a business. Includes detailed lists from her campaign and time as mayor that reflect her main goals and issues she wanted to fix as mayor, mainly government efficiency, public safety, housing, environment, community and economic development, crime, and transportation. There are a few news articles included about religion, because Deedee was not Mormon: one summary of Mormonism in Utah, and a few articles that mention she wasn't a member of the predominant religion. Significance that she was a Utah businesswoman who was not LDS.

35) Alene Dalton papers, 1950-1987

Collection Number: ACCN 0955

Size: 5 boxes

Description:

Alene Olson (1915-1986) was born in Brigham City, Utah. She received her B.A. in child psychology from the University of Utah prior to becoming a teacher. She married Ross Dalton, started her own nursery school, and collaborated with two friends on "My Picture Book of Songs." Dalton went on to become the "Story Princess" on KSL-TV in Salt Lake City. Contains scrapbooks, awards, and art work related to Dalton's tenure as "The Story Princess."

The Alene Dalton papers contain two large scrapbooks relevant to her career at the "Story Princess" including letters from viewers, news articles about her and her program, interviews with Alene. Includes the story of how she got involved in the business and created the character, which would be a helpful reflection about women in business and what starting her career as a television personality was like as a woman. There is not enough information for a project focused only on Dalton, but it could supplement a larger project about women in business.

Civic

36) Daughters of the American Colonists papers, 1937-1996

Collection Number: MS 0223

Size: 10 boxes

Description:

Aside from their civic and beautification programs (specific to SLC), the Daughters of American Colonists were involved in many projects in the interest of civil and national defense. They were the first state organization to sponsor patriotic programs on local radio stations. Perhaps the most lasting and notable contribution to the state by the Daughters of American Colonists was their donation of a permanent display for the United States Constitution. The materials include: minutes, history, reports, expenditures, yearbooks, memorials, and general materials.

In 1937, Edith Louise Wire founded and was first Regent of the Utah Society of this national organization. Members had to demonstrate descent from an original colonist, and were to contribute research and documentation about colonial history and family lineage to be forwarded to the national organization. The group as a whole did some fund-raising via events (see Box 1, Folder 35 contains description of an event held in home of Sterling McMurrin) to collect small amounts to contribute for national restoration projects and to sponsor an annual Christmas party for the VA Hospital. Also in 1937, Edith Wire started a regular radio program featuring various speakers presenting on various "American/patriotic topics." The Utah chapter of the DAC instigated many civic improvement projects such as planting trees at the state capitol. Though not political, the group passed resolutions "to increase education to defeat federal legislation that would limit state control" (Box 1, Folder 24) and periodically endorsed similar pledges to maintain continuing national group affiliation.

41) Annette R. Dinwoodey papers, 1899-2007.

Collection Number: ACCN 0728

Size: 13 boxes

Description:

Annette Richardson Dinwoodey (1906-2007) was born in Farmington, Utah. An accomplished contralto, and although she never went to college. She had two children and because her husband was an executive for Continental Oil, the family traveled extensively. And although Annette put her family above everything else, she still sang everywhere they went, up to and including The Royal Albert Hall, Carnegie Hall, and the Salt Lake City Tabernacle. During her life, Annette serenaded the departing troops in World War II, sang for KSL radio (1930-1945), with the Utah Symphony, and was also the artistic director of the Oratorio Society for many years. Annette Dinwoodey was a passionate member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and in this regard became a determined genealogist. Contains her personal and professional correspondence, diaries, clippings, genealogy, and scrapbooks.

Dinwoodey papers are a very useful collection about professional women whose careers were affected by religious and traditional family expectations. Raised in Utah, she was an award-winning singer from an early age. In Box 7, Folder 5, there is a key biographical article that describes her career. As a singer, she had opportunities to perform internationally, but she gave up training and opportunities to marry her husband. After her daughter was born she won a singing competition and a scholarship to the Curtis Music Institute and an automatic spot at the Metropolitan Opera Company, but turned it down because she would have to leave her family for three years. The collection includes correspondence from family, friends, and other famous musicians about her work and singing. Several news articles from when she lived in London for her husband's job. She was heavily involved with the LDS church, performing in the concert, "International Singing Mother's Chorus," a group of LDS mothers, at the Royal Albert Hall in London, as well as several items of correspondence from the Mormon Tabernacle Choir about her performances.

42) Margaret R. Draper papers, 1890-2010

Collection Number: ACCN 2879

Size: 14 boxes

Description:

Margaret R. Draper (1916-2011) is known for her work as an actress for television and radio from the late 1930s through the 1960s and her work as a disk jockey on WNEW-FM in the 1960s. She did service for the American Red Cross in WWII from 1943-1946. She spent her later life working for and establishing the United Seamen's Service Club. Contains the personal and professional materials including yearbooks, correspondence, travel documents, family genealogy materials, playbills, play scripts, magazines articles and reviews, contracts, news clippings, appointment books, and address books pertaining to her personal and professional life.

The collection contains information about how Draper got started in her theatrical career, beginning with acting in high school. The biographical information contains no mention of religion. Her wedding announcement says she was married in Utah in her parents' home, not in a church or a temple, and in some of her letters she talks about the price of coffee, so she was probably not a member of the LDS church, but she never specifically mentions one way or the other or what affect religion had on her life growing up in Utah. There are a lot of letters to her mother in Box 2, Folder 6 from when she was working in Egypt.

She was also a member of the National Alliance of Business, but there are only a few items of correspondence of club formalities in the collection. I don't think this collection would be very useful to a project about religion or business.

Note: Correspondence between Margaret Draper and her mother between 1945-1981.

52) June Rose Harwood papers, 1890-1982

Collection Number: MS 0543

Size: 12 boxes

Description:

June Harwood taught at East High School, wrote poetry, sketched, and kept extensive diaries. Physical illness hindered her life. Contains diaries, school papers, notebooks, financial records, and correspondence, as well as other correspondence, brochures, manuscripts, books, poetry, and sketches from other family members. Diaries range from 1914 to 1980.

June Rose Harwood papers, 1890-1982

Box 3, Folders 1-8 Correspondence (mainly to June Harwood)

Box 5, Folder 1 Ruth Harwood obituary; Relief Society magazine article

Box 5, Folders 2, 4, 5-8 Ruth Harwood's brochures for lecture business

Box 5, Folders 9-10 Ruth's correspondence (handwritten – distinctive yet legible)

June and Ruth Harwood were the daughters of prominent Paris-trained Utah artist James Taylor Harwood and artist Harriet Richards Harwood (also Paris-trained and probably equally talented but much less touted). One interesting part of this collection are the materials concerning June's sister Ruth Harwood, who made her living partially through writing, art and design business, but mainly by holding lectures across the country and abroad describing her religious work with "the ministry of beauty," the Aquarian ministry, the Temple Builders, etc. She was born into an LDS family and viewed herself as a Christian, but molded herself to become a "national lecturer in the field of constructive visual education toward world oneness."

The collection would also be useful for investigating the plight of women artists in the early 20th century Utah. Boxes 10 and 11 contain some of James and Harriet Harwood papers including notebooks, magazine articles, correspondence, and an account book (Box 11, Folder 6) from which to draw some conclusions about Harriet's career as an artist in comparison with that of husband Frank or daughter Ruth.

(There are various diaries scattered through the 12-box collection. In addition, Box 1 contains 20+ handwritten notebooks and diaries that remain to be catalogued and deciphered.)

56) Hope A. Hilton papers, 1852-1994

Collection Number: MS 0584

Size: 26 boxes

Description:

Hilton was a writer and community activist who organized the Middle East Foundation, a charitable organization devoted to helping students from the Middle East obtain an education in the United States. Contains diaries, correspondence, research files, family histories and genealogy, news clippings, and manuscripts. Hilton was critical in having her mother, Analee Skarin, excommunicated in 1952.

Box 16 - articles, correspondence

Box 17 - manuscripts written by Hope about her travels and religion

The papers contain important resources regarding her travels and experiences with Christianity in the Middle East. Includes information, articles, and correspondence regarding relations between Mormons and Jews in Israel, and Mormons and Arabs in the Middle East, reflecting some tensions, and stories about Muslims and Jews who were baptized into the LDS church. Hope's manuscripts include important personal insights she wrote about her Christian faith while she lived in Cairo, and how they interacted with Arab neighbors and shared Christianity with them. The Hilton papers provide information on the LDS church in Israel but are all Hope's personal experience, so they mainly reflect her personal understanding of Mormonism.

64) Junior League of Salt Lake City records, 1922-2006

Collection Number: MS 0359

Size: 49 boxes

Description:

The Junior League was established nationally to encourage young women to take an active role in community service and find useful outlets for their interests and abilities. The Salt Lake Chapter was established in 1934. Since 1990, the Junior League of Salt Lake City focused its attention on the environment, women, and substance abuse, mental illness, and healthcare concerns. Contains administrative files, meeting minutes, project reports, financial documents, correspondence, news clippings, public relations materials, and scrapbooks.

Boxes 1-16: project and outreach committee summaries and reports

This collection is very helpful about welfare programs, and research in this collection alone could be its own project. The league kept very detailed records and reports about the organizations they started as well as the other Utah organizations they helped provide leadership and direction for from League members. Boxes 1-16 contain all the project reports and materials in alphabetical order by the project name. They did a lot of work to support children and family welfare, proposing specific solutions for the State of Utah in how to prevent child abuse, proposals and committees to protect the environment, promoted political involvement, rape crisis centers and sucide prevention treatment. They were involved in dozens of welfare projects like these in Salt Lake City. Of specific note was their support of the ERA, Box 7, Folder 6 contains a specific outline of the reasons Utah should support the ERA. Doesn't mention the LDS church.

69) Vontella Hess Buchholz Kimball papers, 1931-1971

Collection Number: MS 0264

Size: 6 boxes

Description:

Vontella Hess Buchholz Kimball (1906-1971) was born in Farmington, Utah, and was a great-granddaughter of Heber C. Kimball, a noted pioneer of the Mormon Church. Vontella married S. H. Buchholz in 1926. She married Richard H. Kimball in 1938. When Vontella was seventeen years of age she enrolled at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City and was employed in the cosmetics department of Auerbach's, a local department store. Because of her talents and with the help of her mentor, Helena Rubenstein, she was sent to New York City to learn more about the make-up industry and later became the national education director of a large cosmetic firm called Tussy Cosmetic. The collection consists of diaries, correspondence and newspaper articles that give us an insight to Vontella's life.

Box 3, Folder 2 - Personal Correspondence

Box 3, Folder 10 - Personal and Biographical Information

Most useful resources in this collection are articles and correspondence relating to her career as a business woman, and several articles when she was appointed to teach at BYU. There are news articles about her career in cosmetics, as well as a memoir she dictated that has some personal reflections on her business career. There is not a lot of business related material, but her personal insight into her career as discussed in her memoir would be a good resource.

Note: Travel diaries and notebooks from '50s and 60s. Correspondence.

71) Ladies' Literary Club of Salt Lake City records, 1891-2004

Collection Number: MS 0439

Size: 12 boxes

Description:

The Ladies' Literary Club of Salt Lake City formally opened in January of 1898. It's primary purpose was "literary pursuits and development of mental culture," and from the beginning has worked for charitable and educational causes, as well as many community, civic, and social purposes. The club has also worked to support city libraries, free kindergartens, high school art, scholarship funds, and art in public schools. Records contain yearbooks, correspondence, financial information, membership records, news clippings, and club histories.

There is little to no mention of any welfare projects or philanthropy by this group. There are several yearly calendars included, none of which mention any service or welfare projects. There is a detailed history about how the club was formed - they branched off from another club because they wanted to be more academic and less social. An interesting collection in that they are a group of well-educated women getting together to do more than just have luncheons and teas, but there is no religious or welfare aspect that would be helpful.

Box 1 Utah Federation Histories

Box 13, Folders 1-11 Reports on advocacy efforts regarding the status of women and issues for women in the workforce

The first Utah Business and Professional Women's Club ("BPW") was formed for Utah working women in 1918. By 1923 there were enough city clubs to create a Utah Federation (UF-BPW) as part of the national organization. The group focused on becoming "Better Business Women for a Better Business World" through supporting a long list of women's advocacy efforts coupled with contributing to many works of a civic nature. The collection contains histories, records of events, meeting minutes, correspondence, scrapbooks, reports, clippings, etc. in bound volumes and folders The Utah Federation club history scrapbooks (Boxes 2 – 5, 1954-1975), provide good entry points for various state and national legislative activities and volunteer projects. For example, as early as 1951, the ERA was part of the organization's legislative platform (Box 2, Vol II). Women's unemployment was an issue addressed during the depression. See Box 13 for various project reports and summaries of women's advocacy projects (e.g., folder 10, concerning jury service for women). Members worked with other women's and commercial clubs to support various community preservation, conservation, educational, and charitable service projects. For example, in the late 1950s members began supporting the Chinese Nursing Fund (Box 2, Volume 1954-1962).

The group strove to be "homogenous in efforts to be mutually supportive regarding religion, education, recreation, and social welfare." At every event, reading the working women's "collect" was offered as the group prayer. Executive board meetings were regularly scheduled for Sunday mornings (Box 6). There is little specific regarding the LDS church, but see for example Box 13, Vol. 1951, for reports on changes for traditional Utah women and community service (p. 83), and replies from the LDS Relief Society about expanded rights for women (p. 132).

Suzanna Mae Grua was the main UF-BPW historian and compiler of this collection. Grua, who was a member of the LDS church, was a long-time, often outspoken UF-BFW member who served several terms as state president and as National Western Federation president (See Box 1, Folder 1).
